We agree with our contemporary that it will be very many years before the Japanese learn to do without the foreign middleman and, furthermore, the manufacturers of Europe and America, who have also something to say in the matter, will naturally prefer to be represented in Japan by their own countrymen. The Japanese are at liberty to holsting sode penasut C., to convey men ashere send their representatives to Europe and America either as buyers or salesmen or in the dual capacity, and foreign manufacturers and dealers are equally at liberty to do their intermediate profits, and snabling us to supply business through foreign agents in Japan, as they will always continue to do to a greater or lesser extent. As there are French merchants established in England and English merchants established in France, so will it be in the case of Japan. In the development of the commerce of the country the Japanese will no doubt themselves do a good deal of the business that has hitherto been conducted for them by foreigners, but with the general growth of trade the latter to maintain their position. But should not artificially made from raisins and the fortunes of the muldleman decline it currents, as is generally the case with would not necessarily indicate a decline in foreign trade. Here in the Far East, where every one is now more or less dependent on commission business, we are somewhat inclined to magnify the importance of the middleman and to thruk that his interests are those which the Government should specially safeguard. It is this spirit which is responsible for the disgust and indignation with, which Russ was expelled.

the foreign communities in Japan regard treaty revision. But Imperial interests are not always necessarily identical with those of a class, and Imperial interests must take the first place. It is of more importance that the volume of trade should be increased 6th from Chiengsen, on the Mekong. than that the middleman's interests should be conserved. It is for the middleman to adapt himself to the new conditions as they arise and make what he can out of them, but he cunnot expect that things will be arranged specially for his benefit. We agree with the Japan Mail that the Japanese owe a debt of gratitude to the foreign commercial community; that it is through their efforts that Japan's commerce is what it is to day; that her navy has carned the command o the sea of Japan; that her railroads have hen constructed; that new industries have and address with communications addressed to the started up on every side; and that, last but not least, she has been able to fight her greatest war with China unaided by a foreign loan. The plague began in May, and in that and the succeeding three to Il am. service at St. Peter's (Seamen's) months it reduced our attendance, especially in the girls school, by almost 50 per cent The school, however, was hever closed, and the work with the diminished numbers went on as usual. About the same time we had change in the staff, two of the teachers leaving and their places being supplied by two from England. It will therefore be no matter for surprise that our examination results are port. We understand this is the only case of considerably below our usual high standard. in face of the adverse circumstances, and re collecting that it was our first experience under the new Educational code, must be considered a fair percentage. GERMANY AND RUSSIA AND THE CRISIS NORWAY.

BEBLIN. 7th April. The maturing condict between Norway and Sweden has given rise to strange reports in Berlin. Since Tuesday it has been the commor statement that should the two kingdoms resort to force Empeior William would take up arms rather than permit the threatened interference of Russia.

the is said to have promised King Oscar as much Although official circles discredit the report, the mere thought of it has sufficed to facten general attention upon the swift course of ovents in the Scandinavian peninsula.

Yesterday's dispatches from Stockholm, whi not confirming the predictions of war, describe the situation as very serious. Since King Oscar returned to Stockholm negotiations have been resumed in Christiana between Michelet of the Conservative right, Minister Stang, and the Liberal leader, Steen, but with little prospect of success, as Stang insists upon his resignation.
